AUXILIARY MAKES GENEROUS GIFTS

Orphanage Near Two Taverns Gets Substantial Aid when Women Meet in Gettysburg for Regular Session.

The semi-annual meeting of the ladies' auxiliary of the Hoffman Orphanage Board was held in Gettysburg to-day and a highly encouraging report received of work done during the past six months.

The meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Butt and the following were present: Mrs. Frank Mish, of Hagerstown; Mrs. Charles Corman, of Carlisle; Mrs. Jesse B. Anders, Frederick; Mrs. Agnes Hoffman, Littlestown; Mrs. Clarence M. Schaeffer, Hanover; Mrs. George Wiest and Mrs. Shellymyer, of York; Rev. and Mrs. Stewart Hartman, of the Orphanage; Mrs. William Fisher, of Chambersburg.

At this morning's session the auxiliary determined to contribute $100 toward the cost of the new laundry building now in course of erection at the institution. It was also reported that M. B. Gibson, of York, had decided to give an organ to the orphanage, the gift to be made through the auxiliary. It was decided at this meeting that all the children of the orphanage be taken to the annual Reformed reunion at Pen Mar this summer, their expenses to be borne by the auxiliary.

The officers elected a year ago were chosen for a term of two years so that there was no election this morning. The next meeting will be held at the orphanage the third Thursday in September in conjunction with the board of trustees.

The members attending to-day's meeting were guests at luncheon at the Butt home, following the business session.

FOR STATE HELP

Will Assist Farmers in Marketing Products to Best Advantage.

Community centers which will serve as an organization for the sale and the purchase of agricultural products or commodities related to the farm will be one of the essential features of the constructive work in solving the marketing problem for the farmers of Pennsylvania. This question was thoroughly discussed by the members of the Pennsylvania Commission of Agriculture meeting with the Secretary of Agriculture on Tuesday.

The committee on marketing consisting of Secretary Patton and Commissioners M. E. Bushong, of Lancaster county, and Morris T. Phillips, of Chester county will meet next week to go over the various reports and formulate a general marketing plan that can be adopted for Pennsylvania and which may serve as a model for other states.

PLACE QUARANTINE

Many Biglerville Homes now Under State Regulations.

The work of quarantining Biglerville homes for mumps was completed on Wednesday by Chester Bell, specially appointed officer, and Dr. J. R. Dickson, county medical inspector. INJURED WHILE SHOEING MULE

County Blacksmith Suffers from Broken Leg and Torn Ligaments. Woman Has Pelvis Fractured in Fall up Steps.

Charles Dennis was thrown by a mule and trampled at his blacksmith shop at York Springs this morning, sustaining a double fracture of a bone in his leg and several torn ligaments.

Mr. Dennis was engaged in putting new shoes on a mule of Elmer Strayer when the animal gave a sudden lunge throwing the man to the ground. The fall broke the small bone immediately above the ankle in two places, and the sharp shoes of the mule which trampled on the prostrate man cut the ligaments badly.

Several men standing about the place finally succeeded in quieting the animal and in getting Mr. Dennis from his perilous position. He was carried to his home where the fractures were adjusted and the usual attention given to the torn ligaments. He is resting comfortably this afternoon.

Back Badly Torn

Harry Griffy, aged about 15, of Mt. Holly Springs, was badly injured, Tuesday night, at Carlisle Junction, where he jumped from a freight train. The accident occurred about ten o'clock and it was two o'clock in the morning when the young man arrived at his home after groping through the darkness for several miles. Dr. Irwin was summoned and attended his injuries. Griffy's back was badly lacerated from the neck almost to his hips and part of his scalp was torn off. Dr. Irwin believes that despite the young man's severe injuries, he will recover unless complications, not now apparent, develop.

Pelvis Fracture

Mrs. Taylor, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. O. P. House, in Bendersville, for some time, met with a very bad accident on Wednesday. In ascending the stairs she missed a step and fell, breaking a bone of the pelvis. Mrs. Taylor will go to Harrisburg for hospital treatment. Dr. Asper, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. House will accompany her.

Broke Several Ribs

Mrs. Alice Feiser, a former resident of East Berlin, sustained several fractured ribs Wednesday afternoon when she fell from a step ladder at her home in New Oxford. The accident occurred when Mrs. Feiser was cleaning house. A physician was summoned and reduced the fractures. Mrs. Feiser is about thirty years old.

Salesman Does not Produce Suits and his Arrest Follows.

W. C. Neilson, salesman for $10 suits, who visited this county recently, has been arrested in Hanover on a charge of larceny as he failed to deliver suits on a deposit of $2 had been paid. The complaints came from McSherrytown and the formal charge is laid by Max A. Jaffe, of the Majestic Tailoring Company, New York. The arrest was made in Hanover. Neilson is about 30 years old, claims Minnesota as his home, but says he has not been there for several years. He declares that his parents are worth considerable money.

CENTRE SQUARE TO GET BINDER

Tarvia Treatment Necessary to Allay Dust Nuisance. Oil Some Places. Subscription Lists being Circulated.

Business men about Centre Square were the first to turn over actual cash for treatment of the highway with some dust-laying preparation and this morning they placed in the hands of the borough treasurer sufficient money to put tarvia binder on the entire square. It is expected that the work will be done immediately and then the other parts of town will get the service, in the order in which they ask for it.

Subscriptions are being taken up at a number of places. West Middle street's newly constructed first square will likely be a second to turn over its funds, the residents of that part of town coming forward willingly with their subscriptions. This square now has one of the best roads in town and all that is needed to keep it in good condition over the summer is something to bind the surface.

Several blocks on Baltimore street have subscription lists being circulated and other contributions are expected to come from Springs Avenue, Chambersburg, and Carlisle streets.

Both oil and tarvia will be used, the material to be determined by the condition of the street to be treated, and also by the amount of the subscription raised. In some portions of town the oil would not be satisfactory, while in others people much prefer that to tarvia.

The highway committee of council is preparing to have the application made as quickly as possible so that relief from the dust may be had without any unnecessary delay.

MUST OBEY

Will Take Time on Speeding Motors in New Oxford.

New Oxford is to witness a rigid enforcement of its laws relating to traffic regulation. The ordinance dealing with keeping to the right on the Square must be observed, it was decided by the town council after reading a communication from the borough attorney relative to the ordinance. Burgess Hummer was instructed by council to enforce the ordinance governing the speed of automobiles within the borough limits and to measure off distances along the streets where drivers break this ordinance so that a close watch may be kept.

The police were instructed to arrest any person or persons making unnecessary noises within the borough limits and arrest all loafers who frequent the business places and become nuisances.

AFTER PIKE

State to Assume Control of Portion of Lincoln Highway.

Negotiations looking to the taking over of the Lancaster pike by the State, to be made part of the Lincoln Highway, were reported upon at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Lancaster Avenue Improvement Company at Philadelphia by Secretary-Treasurer Maskell Ewing, who stated that engineers from the State Highway Department were engaged in an examination of the road, following overtures made with the company's officials by the late State Highway Commissioner Cunningham. The latter in February was told the price the company would sell for, but the figures were not made public.

WILL REFUSE

One County Town will not Pay toward Highway Signs.

The New Oxford town council has taken action refusing to spend $7.50 for marking the poles along the route of the Lincoln Highway through that borough. The poles all the way from coast to coast are to have new markings and the various communities will be asked to meet part of the expense. New Oxford will refuse.

SHORT WEIGHT ON BUTTER ONLY

Frequent Visits of County Official Bring Other Package Goods up to Requirements and Butter Trouble Disappearing.

Examination of the package goods in the stores of Adams County is now being conducted by Sealer of Weights and Measures Raffensperger, who states that the enforcement of the law and the rigid inspections being made all over the state is insuring to customers generally full measure on everything that they buy.

The principal article on which short weight has been noted is butter, but there is an apparent effort to correct this. Persons who have been putting up butter in pound prints are more careful than ever before to see that the print actually weighs sixteen ounces. In years gone by the skimping of the weight by an ounce or more was rather the rule than the exception among some persons.

Mr. Raffensperger is now making his second round of the retail stores of the county. Last year on his first trip he inspected and tested all the scales, condemning many, adjusting others, and advising repairs or replacements according to the requirements to provide accurate weight. On the present tour he finds few of the scales needing any attention, and a casual inspection reveals the fact that the stores are generally equipped with scales sure to give the customer what he is paying for.

But little remains, accordingly, but to test the package goods. All of this must be labeled, showing the exact amount of contents. The goods purchased by the grocers in package form are found to be all right in practically every instance, the wholesaler using every precaution to observe the law. Many grocers put up sugar, coffee, and other articles in bags in order to avoid delays on rush days and these, too, must be tested. Mr. Raffensperger finds the merchants equally careful, and there have been but few cases where a warning has been necessary. Butter alone remains to create trouble and the tour of the county now being made by the official will, it is believed, do much to correct the shortage there.

THE FROG SEASON

No Doubt about Its Opening Left by Mr. Buller.

Recently considerable discussion has been entered into by fishermen and sportsmen of the county concerning the season when bullfrogs can be caught within the confines of the state. A letter to N. R. Buller, commissioner of the department of fisheries at Harrisburg, has brought the following reply which clearly covers the matter:

"The Act of April 6, 1903, regulates the catching or taking within this Commonwealth of bullfrogs and terrapin, and provides for a penalty therefor. Section 1, Page 151: 'That from and after the passage of this act, it shall be unlawful to catch, take or kill any bullfrogs, only from the first day of July to the first day of November, and terrapin save only from the first day of November to the fifteenth day of March, in each year.'

"Section 2: Any person or persons offending against the provisions of this act shall be liable to a fine of twenty five dollars for each and every offense, which shall be payable to the school district in which such offense is committed, and may be sued for and recovered before any alderman or justice of the peace of the proper county."

You will see by this that it is only lawful to take frogs from the first day of July to the first day of November. N. R. BULLER, Commissioner.

SOON TIME TO VISIT ORCHARDS

Will be Immense Gardens of Bloom within the Next Few Days. Visitors Likely to be Numerous.

People who annually take pleasure in visiting the apple belt of the county at the time when the bloom is at its height will be interested to know that, under normal conditions, the most favorable time to see the trees will be on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday next. Rising temperature will bring out the blossoms very quickly while cooler weather will retard their development correspondingly.

At the present time the Stayman Wincap, Smokehouse, and Early Ripe apple trees are all in full bloom and present an unusually beautiful sight. But the later varieties, including the York Imperials, will not be at their best before Sunday. The condition of the trees just now is regarded as satisfactory, generally, and the crop should be up to the average if no unfavorable weather conditions develop.

The bloom is practically all off the peach trees. Some of the large orchards were a mass of pink blossoms during the past week, but the petals have fallen now and the "set" is said to be good, indicating a fair crop of this fruit also.

The growers take a great deal of pride in the appearance of their orchards at the time of the bloom and they are most cordial in welcoming visitors who enjoy the sight of the blossom-laden trees.

UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT

Delightful Missionary Program Rendered in the Presbyterian Church.

The Camp Fire Girls of the Presbyterian church, assisted by the Boy Scouts, and young people entertained last evening an audience which filled the Sabbath School room, with a unique and varied program.

The chief, the squaw, and little papooses were grouped about the gaily decorated tepee. They were dressed in all their native togs, feathers, and beads, and the chief sat smoking his wonderfully carved pipe. The room was quite brilliant in genuine Indian blankets, skins, and pictures kindly loaned by many local collectors of Indian relics. The brave chief visited the pale faces to ask that the Bible be sent to his people. Columbia with the scales of justice found the rights of the white man and the Indian equally balanced. The Indian lullaby sung by two tiny papooses elicited a great deal of applause. The legend of the Pansy taught the lesson of unjust treatment of the Indian; the United States taking two portions for every one granted the poor Indian.

The squaw tramped in from the other side of nowhere, with her little papoose strapped in his cradle upon her back. The young brave pleaded with old Mother Government that Justice be done his people, so they, like the white man, could look forward, and not backward.

A telephone message from the palefaces' Missionary Society in Gettysburg promised a Mission School for the young red skins in Montana. The program concluded by the entire audience joining in singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

A nice little sum was realized from the sale of tickets, which will go to the repair fund of the church.

SCOTT AGREES TO GRADUAL RECALL

U. S. Troops to Press Chase After Villa.

MEXICANS TO JOIN HUNT

Tentative Arrangement With General Obregon Said to Provide for Slow Retirement Northward.

El Paso, Tex., May 4.—The tentative agreement which is said to have been reached between Major General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff, and General Alvaro Obregon, minister of war in the de facto Mexican cabinet, is generally understood to provide for a gradual retirement of the American forces now pursuing Francisco Villa in Mexico.

It also was said that the troops now south of the Mexican base at Nampulpa would withdraw from San Antonio to Guerrero, and thence to Nampulpa. This slow process of withdrawal, it is thought, would keep the expedition occupied in policing the restricted zone on the border.

The agreement was further said to provide that the American troops would not enter a Mexican town or come into contact in any way with the Mexican people, that friction between the soldiers and civilians might be prevented.

General Obregon, it was reported, agreed to pursue the Villa bandits with all the soldiers available for the present, that the districts of Chihuahua and Durango could be cleared of the outlaws.

General Obregon received word from Mexico City to accept the demands of the Washington government as made in the conference with General Scott and General Funston. This is taken to mean that the policy of President Wilson and Secretary of War Baker has been accepted and ratified by the Carranza government.

The conference of General Scott and General Obregon was not ended until after midnight and the conferees emerged from the meeting place in good humor. General Scott immediately arranged to send a code message to Washington, giving details of the understanding reached with General Obregon.

Neither General Scott nor General Obregon would talk of the deliberations. It has been suggested that another formal conference may be unnecessary, and that Mexico City and Washington will complete the settlement of military questions that have arisen out of the drive of American troops into Mexico in the chase after Francisco Villa.

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING

Dodd's Cavalrymen Climbed Mountain Side With Knives in Teeth.

Field Headquarters, United States Army in Mexico, by motor courier to Columbus, N. M., May 4.—There was man-to-man fighting, and some of the Americans went up the mountain side with knives in their teeth during Colonel George A. Dodd's battle with Villista bandits, April 22, at Temochito. "It was the devil's own playground," was Colonel Dodd's description of the terrain of this battle in southwestern Chihuahua, among towering mountains, were 150 bandits sought refuge.

For two hours Dodd's troops of the Seventh Cavalry fought from an immense hollow, with bandits on three sides, charging deliberately over ground marked with bullet puffs in the dust all about their feet, where the Mexicans had their range. They accounted for at least fifty bandits killed or wounded, against an American loss of two dead and three wounded. One Mexican woman was wounded by bandits.

EXPORTS RECORDS BROKEN

March Trade $410,000,000 Double the Average.

Washington, May 4.—All world's export records were broken by the United States during March, and it was predicted by department of commerce officials that at the end of the fiscal year this country would have a trade balance of $2,000,000,000 in its favor. Statistics announced show March exports valued at $410,000,000, which is double the March average for the last five years.

For the nine months ending with March, exports were $2,995,000,000, exceeding the same period last year by more than $1,000,000,000. March imports were $214,000,000, and for the nine months $1,505,000,000.

Five Men Drowned in Log Drive.

Potsdam, N. Y., May 4.—Five men, four of them Indians from the St. Regis reservation, and one a white man, Daniel Shea, of South Colton, were drowned when their boat capsized at the foot of Rainbow falls on the Racquette river, twenty miles from here, in the Adirondack mountains. The men were employed on the spring log drive on the river. There were eleven men in the boat. Other rivermen rescued six, including the foreman.

RUSSIA JOINS JAPAN TO DISPOSE OF CHINA

Treaty Shuts Door and Threatens Power Interfering.

Pekin, May 4.—Russia and Japan have agreed upon a return of the "closed door" for China.

A new treaty establishing Russian and Japanese rights in Chinese territory has been negotiated between Tokyo and Petrograd by which the "open door" on the Chinese coast, so valiantly championed by the United States, is to be closed.

Mail service from Tokyo, which escaped the attentions of the censor by reason of being sent by post instead of telegraph, indicate that Japan and Russia, taking advantage of the situation brought about by the world war, are planning between themselves. The chief articles of the new Russo-Japanese treaty follow:

Russia will cede to Japan a portion of the Chinese Eastern railway from a point south of Harbin (Manchuria) to Chang Chung.

While the present war lasts Japan will supply Russia with arms and other war supplies as far as is compatible with the defense of the country and Japan's manufacturing capacity.

Russia shall give liberal treatment to Japanese who live and engage in agricultural, commercial and industrial pursuits in eastern Siberia, northern Sakhalin and in the territory belonging to the Chinese Eastern railway in Manchuria.

Russia shall maintain Vladivostok as a commercial port and shall not carry out any further military preparations likely to arouse the suspicions of Japan regarding Russia's intentions.

Japan and Russia shall respect each others' interests in Manchuria and Mongolia, and if any disturbance takes place within the Russian sphere of influence during the progress of the present war, Japan, if requested, shall give Russia assistance for the suppression of the disturbance.

NO CITIZENSHIP FOR I. W. W.

Undesirable, Judge O'Boyle Declares From Bench.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 4.—Judge Peter A. O'Boyle, sitting in naturalization court here, announced that members of the I. W. W. cannot obtain citizenship papers in this country.

He said they are undesirable, and withheld their petitions after granting citizenship to a large number of other aliens.

Judge O'Boyle remarked from the bench that the members of this organization contumacious and even instigate trouble and use un-American means of voicing their displeasure about conditions with which they do not agree. He said aliens of this type are not wanted here and cannot be given the privileges of the country through his court.

BERLIN U-BOAT REPLY READY

Puts Future of the Issue Up to the U. S.

MAY BE DELIVERED TODAY

President Wilson Must Decide if Germany's Proposals Meet American Demands.

Berlin, May 4.—The German reply to the American note on submarine warfare may be expected momentarily.

It now appears, however, that today may be the day on which it will be handed to the American embassy. Following the submission of the German reply the center of gravity in the situation, it is considered here, will rest in Washington, where it must be decided whether the proposal which Germany makes meets the conditions of the last paragraph of the American note.

The attitude of Germany will be stated in clear and precise terms. The note will leave no room for doubt concerning the exact position assumed by Germany, which will communicate the definite nature of instructions that will be given to submarine commanders and other data on which Washington itself can judge the situation.

The conference of high German authorities at headquarters has been concluded and Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial chancellor, it is understood, is on his way to Berlin.

Ambassador Gerard visited Foreign Minister von Jagow here, but continued absolutely uncommunicative on the situation. The foreign office also declined to have anything to say on the subject.

Later Ambassador Gerard received the newspaper correspondents. He declined to make the slightest reference to the occasion of his visit to the emperor, explaining that the situation imposed absolute silence on him. It was learned, however, that he received Secretary Lansing's telegram of instructions in time to consult with Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg before his departure.

The German reply to the American note will not decide whether a breach will come between the United States and Germany, according to the Koelnsche Volks Zeitung. The decision, this newspaper says, will rest entirely with President Wilson, depending upon the answer he is expected to make to the German note.

The Volks Zeitung asserts the basic principles of the German communication have been decided upon, and that the question now is whether President Wilson will accept Germany's proposals as satisfactory, or whether he desires "war at any price."

Spain Supports U. S. in Boat Issue.

Paris, May 4.—The Spanish government says a despatch to the Temps from Madrid, is disposed to support the policy of the United States regarding submarine warfare, and it America asks neutral powers in general to safeguard their rights Spain is willing to subscribe to a general understanding with a view of preventing Germany from continuing the form of submarine warfare she heretofore has followed.

Woman to Be Dogcatcher.

Freehold, N. J., May 4.—Mrs. William S. Holmes, daughter of the late William M. Ivins, has discarded the time-worn assertion that woman's place is in the home. FRENCH TAKE MORE GERMAN PRISONERS

Gen. Petain's Forces "Nibble" Teuton Lines.

London, May 4.—Once again General Petain has launched his forces against the German lines and as on previous occasions during the past few days, when the French assailed the Teuton positions, gains were made.

This time the "nibble" was made in the northwest of Dead Man's Hill and in addition to the capture of the German positions there, 100 Teutons were taken prisoners and four machine guns captured. This information is contained in an official communication issued in Paris.

At other points along the Verdun front the infantry has been resting, but the big gun bombardment on both sides has assumed considerable intensity west of the Meuse and to the west of Domancourt, indicating a resumption of infantry operations in these sectors in the near future.

Paris reports a sharp conflict in the Argonne region just west of Verdun, the Germans gaining a foothold in advanced French positions after liberally shelling them with gas-carrying projectiles. The French subsequently drove out the German troops, inflicting heavy losses upon them.

ZEPPELINS RAID SCOTLAND

Attack on Kent Follows Dirigibles Visit to Northern Britain.

London, May 4.—A German aeroplane bombed the city of Deal, in Kent.

One man was injured. An official statement says the raiders came from the direction of Ramsgate and added: "Six bombs were dropped on the railway station. Several houses were damaged. The aeroplane escaped flying above the clouds. Our craft pursued it."

Five Zeppelins appeared over the northeast coast of England and the southeast coast of Scotland early Tuesday night.

Fire from high angle guns and aeroplanes is believed to have badly damaged one of the Zeppelins.

H. J. Tennant, parliamentary under secretary for war, said in commons that seventeen bombs had been dropped "in the agricultural districts," and the damage was insignificant.

The objectives of the raiders were: evidently Hull, Grimsby, Hartlepool and Newcastle, all important points for shipping.

FEDERAL CONTROL GROWING YEARLY

Government Now Supervises Work In Many Directions.

STATE RIGHTS DISAPPEARING

By Making Appropriations Which Are Spent In Various Localities Congress Is Enabled Directly To Benefit The People To A Greater Degree Than Ever Before—Old Idea Is Overcome.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, May 4.—[Special.]—A careful scrutiny of the appropriation bills, together with the new legislation, develops a growing disposition on the part of members of congress to have the general government control in almost every direction. Comment has been made heretofore about the obliterating of state lines, but the past quarter of a century has seen rapid steps in that direction.

Not only has the control of the government been shown by acts of legislation, but the decisions of the courts have gone further in that direction than ever before.

The bills for government control are usually coupled with appropriations from the federal treasury to do in states and communities that which heretofore has been done by states, communities or individuals.

Some Recent Examples.

The agricultural appropriation bill is filled with provisions for investigation, experiments and for work of various kinds which a few years ago was done entirely by the people themselves. The agricultural department cost about $2,000,000 during the Harrison administration, and it costs more than $20,000,000 now.

In addition to that, the government is going into the supervision of grain grading, the selling of cotton, and if the present measures should pass the government will take a long step in the direction of the control of the public resources and in their development. In addition to that, the rural credits bill, the vocational education bill and other measures seem to indicate a rapid advance in the direction of federalization of public affairs.

Of Much Benefit.

There is no question that all of this has been of much benefit to the whole country, and comment is only made because of the fact that the change in sentiment has been so rapid and so important. A few years ago the question of state rights would have been raised on nearly every one of these subjects. At the beginning of appropriations of this character the state rights bugaboo was interposed to prevent the government doing anything for the benefit of the people. Now we never hear of it.

Pleasant Resting Place.

The civilian membership of the committee on board of ordinance and fortifications is one of those pleasant resting places for men who have served their country in the senate or house and who for one reason or another have been let out. Among the men who have held the position were former Representatives Henderson of Illinois and Outwaite of Ohio and Senators Cockrell and Warner of Missouri, and the latest appointee is former Senator Thornton of Louisiana. There is not much for civilian members to do.

They Trot Out the Old Mammy.

Whenever there is a race issue raised in a debate in congress it is almost certain that some man from the sunny south will trot out the old mammy who nursed him and took care of him as a baby. From the many times that this has been heard in congress there must have been a lot of these old mammys, and they seem to have been well occupied in taking care of prospective southern congressmen.

Manufactured Influence.

Every little while congress affects to be much surprised on account of the "manufactured influence" that is brought to bear upon senators and representatives to secure the enactment or the defeat of some measure pending in congress.

There has never been a time when shrewd men could not secure manufactured petitions and telegrams or other influence to be brought upon members of congress. Chairman Moon of the house committee on postoffices had this brought home to him recently when he provided a hearing on the bill to pension postal employees who were no longer fit for service at $900 a year. At the time set for the hearing about a hundred members of the house put in an appearance. It was found after ward that all of them had received from one to a dozen telegrams from different sections of their districts announcing the date of the hearing, telling what the bill was and asking them to "look after our interests."

Opposed to Romanian.

During the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill Congressman Bennett of New York tried to have an amendment adopted dropping off the "al" of the words "investigational" and "demonstrational." Failing in that he tried to have an amendment adopted to have "al" attached to all words of a similar character appearing in the bill. "If we are going to drop the English 'ive' and put on the Romanian 'al' let's do it with everything," said the New Yorker.

The Dog.

I've never known a dog to wag
His tail in glad he didn't feel,
Nor quit his old time friend to tag
At some more influential heel.
The yellowest cur I ever knew
Was, to the boy who loved him, true.

I've never known a dog to show
Halfway devotion to his friend
To seek a kinder man to know
Or richer, but unto the end
The humblest dog I ever knew
Was, to the man that loved him, true.

I've never known a dog to fake
Affection for a present gain,
A false display of love to make
Some little favor to attain.
I've never known a Prince or Spot
That seemed to be what he was not.

But I have known a dog to fight
With all his strength to shield a friend,
And whether wrong or whether right,
To stick with him until the end.
And I have known a dog to lick
The hand of him that men would kick.

And I have known a dog to bear
Starvation's pangs from day to day
With him who had been glad to share
His bread and meat along the way.
No dog, however mean or rude,
Is guilty of ingratitude.

The dog is hated with the dumb.
No voice has he to speak his creed.
His messages to humans come
By faithful conduct and by deed.
He shows, as seldom mortals do,
A high ideal of being true.

FARM LANDS OF NATION ARE INCREASING IN VALUE

Five Dollars Per Acre Added During the Past Twelve Months.

The value of farm lands of the United States, without improvement, is estimated at $45.55 per acre, as compared with $40.55 a year ago, $40.31 two years ago, $38.10 three years ago and $36.23 four years ago. The census reported the value of farm lands in 1910 as $32.40, and in 1900 as $15.57 per acre.

In recent years the value of farm lands has been increasing at the rate of about 5 per cent a year, or approximately $2 per acre per year. The exceptional increase of the past year may be explained partly by the reaction in the southern cotton states following a temporary depression last year and partly by the stimulus given by the war to prices, particularly of grain.

Increases have been general throughout the United States, the only noteworthy exceptions being orchard lands and some irrigated lands in the north west, which apparently had been overvalued before.

The percentage increases in value of farm lands in the past year by sections of the United States are: North Atlantic states, 10 per cent; eastern part of north central states, 9 per cent; western part of north central states, 12 per cent; south Atlantic states, 19 per cent; south central states, 11 per cent; entire United States, 11.5 per cent.

The percentage increases in farm land values in four years—that is, since 1912, are: North Atlantic states, 17 per cent; eastern part of north central states, 20 per cent; western part of north central states, 23 per cent; south Atlantic states, 25 per cent; far western states, 34 per cent; entire United States, 25.7 per cent.

These estimates are based upon reports from crop reporters of the bureau of crop estimates of the department of agriculture.

DIPLOMACY COLLEGE COURSE.

Eighty Universities to Give Lectures on International Relations.

Eighty universities, colleges and normal schools in the United States will co-operate with the division of international relations of the Carnegie endowment for international peace by offering during their summer sessions courses on international law, international relations, American diplomacy and Spanish and Latin American affairs. The Carnegie endowment, acting through the American Association for International Conciliation, will supply the instructors in some cases or will grant allotments to defray part of their salaries in others.

The subjects are to be offered as part of the regular college curriculum and are to be given by experts.

The work was offered in about seventy-five institutions last year, and the total enrollment was approximately 2,000. The object of the work, successfully carried on in 1915, is to spread a wider and more accurate knowledge of international polity and international relations.

That's What New York Does, Upstate
Rector Says He's Heard.

The Rev. Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church of Rochester, N. "Our religion is not costing us enough," he declared. "We give to God a part of what we have left after we have amply provided for ourselves."

Why

Less mileage

No, Sir; mileage is not altogether a question of gas. Oil's gotta lot to do with it, you bet. Do you know that, in actual tests, cars have been known to yield as much as five additional miles per gallon of gas when the right lubricant was used? 'Sfact.

You oughta be getting that extra mileage, especially since it doesn't cost extra. There's one safe, sure way of taking figures off your gas and oil bill and putting them on the speedometer where they belong.

Use the combination—Atlantic Gas for fuel; Atlantic Motor Oils for lubrication. You can't beat that team anywhere.

Atlantic Polarine is THE oil for eight out of ten cars. The alternative is one of the other three principal oils—Atlantic "Light," Atlantic "Medium" or Atlantic "Heavy."

The reputation of the oldest and largest lubricant manufacturers in the world stands back of these four oils. Start using Atlantic Motor Oils today and note the difference in mileage.

Read up on this subject. We have published a handsome and comprehensive book about lubrication. It is free. Ask your garage for it. If they cannot supply you drop us a postal and the book will be sent you without charge.

"Challenger?" He gathered his brows in scientific disapproval. "Challenger was the man who came with some cock and bull story from South America."

"What story?"

"Oh, it was rank nonsense about some queer animals he had discovered. I believe he has retracted since. Anyhow, he has suppressed it all. He gave an interview to a news agency, and there was such a howl that he saw it wouldn't do. It was a discreditable business. There were one or two folk who were inclined to take him seriously, but he soon choked them off."

"How?"

"Well, by his insufferable rudeness and impossible behavior. There was poor old Wadley of the Zoological Institute. Wadley sent a message. 'The president of the Zoological Institute presents his compliments to Professor Challenger and would take it as a personal favor if he would do them the honor to come to their next meeting.' The answer was by Professor Challenger was unprintable."

"You don't say?"

"Well, a bowdlerized version of it would run, 'Professor Challenger presents his compliments to the president of the Zoological Institute and would take it as a personal favor if he would go to the devil.'"

"Good Lord!"

"Yes, I expect that's what old Wadley said. I remember his wall at the meeting, which began, 'In fifty years' experience of scientific intercourse—' It quite broke the old man up. He hasn't recovered yet."

"Anything more about Challenger?"

"Well, I'm a bacteriologist, you know. I live in a 900 diameter microscope. I can hardly claim to take serious notice of anything that I can see with my naked eye. I'm a frontiersman from the extreme edge of the knowable, and I feel quite out of place when I leave my study and come into touch with all you great, rough, hulking creatures. I'm too detached to talk scandal, and yet at scientific conversations I have heard something of Challenger, for he is one of those men when nobody can ignore. He's as clever as they make 'em, a full charged battery of force and vitality, but a quarrelsome, ill conditioned faddist and unscrupulous at that. He had gone the length of faking some photographs over the South American business."

"You say he is a faddist. What is his particular fad?"

"He has a thousand, but the latest is something about Weissmann and evolution. He had a fearful row about it in Vienna, I believe."

Half an hour later I was seated in the newspaper office, with a huge tome in front of me, which had been opened at the article "Weissmann versus Darwin," with the subheading: "Spirited Protest at Vienna. Lively Proceedings." My scientific education having been somewhat neglected, I was unable to follow the whole argument, but it was evident that the English professor had handled his subject in a very aggressive fashion and had thoroughly annoyed his continental colleagues.

"Protests," "Uproar" and "General appeal to the chairman" were three of the first brackets which caught my eye. Most of the matter might have been written in Chinese for any definite meaning that it conveyed to my brain.

"I wish you could translate it into English for me," I said pathetically to my helpmate.

"Well, it is a translation. That is the trouble."

"Then I'd better try my luck with the original."

"It is certainly rather deep for a layman."

"If I could only get a single good, meaty sentence which seemed to convey some sort of definite human idea it would serve my turn. Ah, yes, this one will do. I seem in a vague way almost to understand it. I'll copy it out. This shall be my link with the terrible professor."

"Nothing else I can do?"

"Well, yes; I propose to write to him. If I could frame the letter here and use your address it would give atmosphere."

"We'll have the fellow around here making a row and breaking the furniture."

"No, no; you'll see the letter—nothing contentious, I assure you."

"Well, that's my chair and desk. You'll find paper there. I'd like to censor it before it goes."

It took some time going, but I flatter myself that it wasn't such a bad job when it was finished. I read it aloud to the critical bacteriologist with some pride in my handiwork. This is the way I worded it:

Dear Professor Challenger—As a humble student of nature, I have always taken the most profound interest in your speculations as to the differences between Darwin and Weissmann. I have recently had occasion to refresh my memory by re-reading—

"You infernal liar!" murmured Tarp Henry.

—by re-reading your masterly address at Vienna. That lucid and admirable statement seems to be the last word in the matter. There is one sentence in it, however—namely, "I protest strongly against the insufferable and entirely dogmatic assertion that each separate 'id' is a microcosm possessed of an historical architecture elaborated slowly through the ages."

"I have no desire, in view of later research, to modify this statement. Do you not think that it is over accentuated? With your permission, I would ask the favor of an interview, as I feel strongly upon the subject and have certain suggestions which I could only elaborate in a personal conversation. With your consent, I trust to have the honor of calling at 11 o'clock the day after tomorrow (Wednesday) morning."

I remain, sir, with assurances of profound respect, yours very truly,

EDWARD D. MALONE.

Tarp Henry said he would have an answer Wednesday morning and added that it might be best if I never heard from Challenger at all.

CHAPTER II.

Face to Face With Professor.

WHEN I called on Wednesday there was a letter with the West Kensington postmark upon it and my name scrawled across the envelope in a handwriting which looked like a barbed wire railing. The contents were as follows:

Enmore Park, W.

Sir—I have duly received your note, in which you claim to indorse my views, although I am not aware that they are dependent upon indorsement either from you or any one else. You have ventured to use the word "speculation" with regard to my statement upon the subject of Darwinism, and I would call your attention to the fact that such a word in such a connection is offensive to a degree. The context convinces me, however, that you have sinned rather through ignorance and tactlessness than through malice, so I am content to pass the matter by. You quote an isolated sentence from my lecture and appear to have some difficulty in understanding it. I should have thought that only a subhuman intelligence could have failed to grasp the point, but if it really needs amplification I shall endeavor to see you at the hour named, though visits and visitors of every sort are exceeding distasteful to me. As to your suggestion that I may modify my opinion I would have you know that it is not my habit to do so after a deliberate expression of my mature views. You will kindly show the envelope of this letter to my man, Austin, when you call, as he has to take every precaution to shield me from the intrusive rascals who call themselves "journalists." Yours faithfully,

GEORGE EDWARD CHALLENGER.

It was nearly half past 10 before I had received my message, but a taxi cab took me round in good time for my appointment. It was an imposing porticoed house at which we stopped, and the heavily curtained windows gave every indication of wealth on the part of this formidable professor. The door was opened by an odd, swarthy, dried up person of uncertain age, with a dark pilot jacket and brown leather gaiters. I found afterward that he was the chauffeur who filled the gaps left by a succession of fugitive butlers. He looked me up and down with a searching light blue eye.

"Expected?" he asked.

"An appointment."

"Got your letter?"

I produced the envelope.

"Right!" He seemed to be a person of few words. Following him down the passage, I was suddenly interrupted by a small woman, who stepped out from what proved to be the dining room door. She was a bright, vivacious, dark eyed lady, more French than English in her type.

"One moment," she said. "You can wait, Austin. Step in here, sir. May I ask if you have met my husband before?"

"No, madam; I have not had the honor."

"Then I apologize to you in advance. I must tell you that he is a perfectly impossible person—absolutely impossible. If you are forewarned you will be the more ready to make allowances."

"It is most considerate of you, madam."

"Get quickly out of the room if he seems inclined to be violent. Don't wait to argue with him. Several people have been injured through doing that. Afterward there is a public scandal, and it reflects upon me and all of us. I suppose it wasn't about South America you wanted to see him?"

I could not lie to a lady.

"Dear me! That is his most dangerous subject. You won't believe a word he says. I'm sure I don't wonder. But don't tell him so, for it makes him very violent. Pretend to believe him and you may get through all right. Remember he believes it himself. Of that you may be assured. A more honest man never lived. Don't wait any longer or he may suspect. If you find him dangerous—really dangerous—ring the bell and hold him off until I come. Even at his worst I can usually control him."

With these encouraging words the lady handed me over to the taciturn Austin, who had waited like a bronze statue of discretion during our short interview, and I was conducted to the end of the passage. There was a tap at a door, a bull's bellow from within, and I was face to face with the professor.

He sat in a rotating chair behind a broad table, which was covered with books, maps and diagrams. As I entered his seat spun round to face me. His appearance made me gasp. I was prepared for something strange, but not for so overpowering a personality as this. It was his size which took one's breath away—his size and his imposing presence. His head was enormous, the largest I have ever seen upon a human being. I am sure that his top hat, had I ever ventured to don it, would have slipped over me entirely and rested on my shoulders. He had the face and beard which I associate with an Assyrian bull—the former florid, the latter so black as almost to have a suspicion of blue, spade shaped and rippling down over his chest. The hair was peculiar, plastered down in front in a long, curving wisp over his massive forehead. The eyes were blue gray under great black tufts, very clear, very critical and very masterful. A huge spread of shoulders and a chest like a barrel were the other parts of him which appeared above the table, save for two enormous hands covered with long black hair. This and a bellowing, roaring, rumbling voice made up my first impression of the notorious Professor Challenger.

"Well?" said he, with a most insolent stare. "What now?"

I must keep up my deception for at least a little time longer, otherwise here was evidently an end of the interview.

"You were good enough to give me an appointment, sir," said I, humbly, producing his envelope.

He took my letter from his desk and laid it out before him.

"Oh, you are the young person who cannot understand plain English, are you?" My general conclusions you are good enough to approve, as I understand?

"Entirely, sir—entirely!" I was emphatic.

"Dear me! That strengthens my position very much, does it not? You age and appearance make your support doubly valuable. Well, at least you are better than that herd of swine in Vienna, whose gregarious grunt is, however, not more offensive than the isolated effort of the British hog!" He glared at me as the present representative of the beast.

"They seem to have behaved abominably," said I.

"I assure you that I can fight my own battles and that I have no possible need of your sympathy. Put me alone, sir, and with my back to the wall. G. E. C. is happiest then. Well, sir, let us do what we can to curtail this visit, which can hardly be agreeable to you and is inexplicably tiresome to me. You had, as I have been led to believe, some comments to make upon the proposition which I advanced in my thesis."

There was a brutal directness about his methods which made evasion difficult. I must still make play and wait for a better opening. It had seemed simple enough at a distance. Oh, my Irish wits, could they not help me now?

"I am, of course, a mere student," said I, with a fatuous smile, "hardly more, I might say, than an earnest inquirer. At the same time, it seemed to me that you were a little severe upon Weissmann in this matter. Has not the general evidence since that date tended to—well, to strengthen his position?"

"What evidence?" He spoke with a menacing calm.

"Well, of course I am aware that there is not any what you might call definite evidence. I alluded merely to the trend of modern thought and the general scientific point of view, if I might so express it."

He leaned forward with great earnestness.

"I suppose you are aware," said he, checking off points upon his fingers,

"We did a Catharine wheel together down the passage."

the door or we should have gone through it. We did a Catharine wheel together down the passage. Somehow we gathered up a chair upon our way and bounded on with it toward the street. My mouth was full of his beard, our arms were locked, our bodies intertwined and that infernal radiated its legs all round us. The watchful Austin had thrown open the hall door. We went with a back somersault down the front steps. I have seen the two Maes attempt something of the kind at the halls, but it appears to take some practice to do it without hurting oneself. The chair went to matchwood at the bottom, and we rolled apart into the gutter. He sprang to his feet, waving his fists and wheezing like an asthmatic.

"Had enough?" he panted.

"You infernal bully!" I cried as I gathered myself together.

Then and there we should have tried the thing out, for he was offensively with fight, but fortunately I was rescued from an odious situation. A policeman was beside us, his notebook in his hand.

"What's all this? You ought to be ashamed," said the policeman. It was the most rational remark which I had heard in Enmore Park. "Then," he said, turning to me, "what seems to be the trouble?"

"This man attacked me," said I. "Did you attack him?" asked the policeman.

The professor breathed hard and said nothing.

"It's not the first time, either," said the policeman, severely, shaking his head. "You were in trouble last month for the same thing. You've blackened this young man's eye. Do you give him in charge, sir?"

I relented.

"No," said I, "I do not."

"What's that?" said the policeman. "I was to blame myself. I intruded upon him. He gave me fair warning."

The policeman snapped up his notebook.

"Don't let us have any more such going on," said he. "Now, then, move on, there, move on!" This to a bunch of boys, a maid and one or two loafers who had collected. He clumped heavily down the street, driving this little flock before him. The professor looked at me, and there was something humorous in the back of his eyes.

"Come in!" said he. "I've not done with you yet."

The speech had a sinister sound, but I followed him none the less into the house. The manservant, Austin, like a wooden image, closed the door behind us.

You've lost your sense of proportion. Swollen gas bags! Ill keep you in your proper place. Yes, sir, you haven't got over G. E. C. There's one man who is still your master. He warned you off, but if you will come by the Lord you do it at your own risk. Forfeit, my good Mr. Malone. I claim forfeit! You have played a rather dangerous game, and it strikes me that you have lost it."

"Look here, sir," said I, backing to the door and opening it. "You can be as abusive as you like, but there is a limit. You shall not assault me."

"Shall I not?" He was slowly advancing in a peculiarly menacing way, but he stopped now and put his big hands into the side pockets of a rather boyish short jacket which he wore. "I have thrown several of you out of the house. You will be the fourth or fifth. Three pound fifteen each—that is how it averaged. Expensive, but very necessary. Now, sir, why should you not follow your brethren? I rather think you must."

He resumed his unpleasant and stealthy advance, pointing his toes as he walked, like a dancing master.

I could have bolted for the hall door, but it would have been too ignominious. Besides, a little glow of righteous anger was springing up within me. I had been hopelessly in the wrong before, but this man's menaces were putting me in the right.

"I'll trouble you to keep your hands off, sir. I'll not stand it."

"Dear me!" His black mustache lifted and a white fang twinkled in a sneer. "You won't stand it, eh?"

"Don't be such a fool, professor!" I cried. "What can you hope for? I'm fifteen stone, as hard as nails and play center three-quarter every Saturday for the London Irish. I'm not the man!"

It was at that moment that he rushed at me. It was lucky that I had opened

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health message is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, yellow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

FOUR IRISH CHIEFS SHOT

Pearse, Connolly and Two Others Executed.

JAIL FOR THREE OTHERS

Mr. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, Blamed for Not Preventing Revolt, Resigns.

London, May 4.—Patrick Henry Pearse, "provisional president" of the short-lived "Republic of Ireland"; James Connolly, who was styled "commandant general of the Irish Republican army"; Thomas J. Clark and Thomas MacDonagh were shot after trial by court-martial. All were signers of the Irish Republican proclamation.

Announcement of this fact was made in the house of commons by Premier Asquith, who said three other signers of the Republican proclamation had been sentenced each to three years' imprisonment. The signers, according to a despatch from Dublin, shortly after the outbreak of the revolt, included, besides those executed, S. MacDiarmid, E. Ceannt and Joseph Plunkett.

(Premier Asquith did not say where the executions took place, but one report says the prisoners were shot in Ireland.)

Augustine Birrell, who had been chief secretary for Ireland since 1907, and who is a nephew of William E. Gladstone, resigned, after a long conference with the premier. His action was the direct result of the revolt, and followed a campaign of criticism by the press, in which he was accused of leniency in the face of gathering signs of the uprising.

Trials of many of the leaders and most of the rank and file of the revolutionists will be held in England. Evidence to be used against them is being forwarded to England. Baron Wimborne, lord lieutenant of Ireland, may testify against the leaders.

Sir Roger Casement, who was captured while trying to land arms and ammunition on the coast of Ireland from a German ship, has expressed a wish that he be tried first "to set an example of fortitude and courage." It is likely that the majority of the insurgents will be imprisoned until the end of the war.

Important documentary evidence has been found in houses of prominent Sinn Féiners in Dublin.

It is estimated that there are now between 1000 and 1200 prisoners in the hands of the military authorities, more than half of whom are being sent to prisons in England. Some are still held on warships in Dublin bay. The English troops have collected more than 60,000 rifles and a few old pieces of artillery, some of which will be used as exhibits against the revolutionists when they are placed on trial.

Hurry Court-Martial Trials.

Dublin, May 4.—One thousand revolutionist prisoners were marched through the city under strong military escort.

They included many youths in their teens, and several women. It is said several thousand prisoners have been taken.

An official statement said: "Rebels considered suitable for trial are being tried by a field general court-martial under the defence of the realm act. As soon as the sentences have been confirmed the public will be informed as to the result of the trial."

"Others are being sent to places in England. Their cases will receive consideration later. The cases of women taken prisoners are under consideration."

"The work of dealing with these trials is of great magnitude and is being proceeded with all dispatch."

The chief of the fire department estimates the damage to buildings at $1,000,000 ($5,000,000) and to stock at $750,000 ($3,750,000). The number of buildings destroyed or damaged is 179.

Convict Packers of Violating Law.

Chicago, May 4.—The packing firm of Swift & Co. was found guilty by a jury in the federal court of violation of the interstate commerce laws. The maximum penalty which can be imposed is a fine of $252,000. The government charged that the company shipped less than carload lots to points in Michigan at carload rates.

$2000 for Broken Promise.

Lancaster, Pa., May 4.—A common pleas court jury awarded $2000 damages to Miss Alice E. Seitz, of Mountville, in her breach of promise suit against Clayton D. Newcomer, well-to-do resident of Mountville. The evidence showed he had courted her fifteen years and then broke the engagement and married a widow.

Fire Sweeps New York Pier.

New York, May 4.—Fire swept the pier of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad, at Twenty-eighth street and North river. About $100,000 worth of freight was destroyed. The fire was burning fiercely at 2:30 o'clock, but was reported under control.

MARTIAL LAW ON THE MONONGAHELA

Westinghouse Strikers Ask For a Conference.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 4.—The whole Monongahela valley is under martial law, and at eight o'clock last night no one was allowed on the streets of Braddock, East Pittsburgh, Wilmerding and Turtle Creek, which district covers the plants of the Westinghouse affiliated companies and the mills of the United States Steel corporation, all of which have been threatened by the strikers from the Westinghouse shops.

However, light is beginning to penetrate the industrial gloom. Patrick Gilday, chief of the state bureau of mediation and arbitration, has arranged with President E. M. Herr, of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company, for a conference with the mediation committee of the strikers. The men have asked for this meeting, which is the first break in their stonewall demeanor against interference by any one since the strike began.

It is felt by many of the strikers the presence of the military means the company will start up the works with strikebreakers unless a settlement is made.

Smallpox Closes Theatres
Wilmington Board of Health Also Shuts-Fourteen Saloons.
Wilmington, Del., May 4.—All the theatres of the city and fourteen saloons have been closed by orders of the board of health because of the smallpox scare.

The base ball game between the Anchor Glants, of Philadelphia, and the Wilmington Atlantic League team, scheduled for today, has been cancelled. All the occupants of the DuPont office building are being vaccinated.

Mayor Price has issued a proclamation calling upon all citizens to act in cooperation with the board of health in stamping out the epidemic, to give all houses, cellars and yards a thorough cleaning, and to avoid crowds.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

George Lewis, Outfielder of the Boston Red Sox.

George "Duffy" Lewis, the great left gardener of the Boston Americans, placed his name on the baseball roll of honor by his fine work in the world's series of 1915. Duffy's performance at the bat and in the field was superb. He led all contenders at the bat in the series, hitting for a percentage of .444. Lardner was next, with .437. In the field Lewis cut off many hits, saving the game on more than one occasion. Lewis was born in San Francisco twenty-eight years ago and started his baseball career as a collection on the Pacific coast. He was acquired by Boston in 1910 and has been a regular all-most from his first day. He bats and throws right handed and is considered one of the best throwing outfielders in the game.

Yale to Wear Numbers.

Yale's football executive committee has decided that the Yale players shall be numbered for the first time. Harvard alone of the big eleven has failed to order numbers for its gridiron men. The full resident coaching staff for Yale is as follows: Head coach, Theodore A. D. Jones; advisory coach, Michael F. Sweeney; kicking coach and scout, Dr. William Thillinghast Bull; line coach, Dr. Arthur Bridges; end coach, Clarence Alcott, and freshman coach, William Marting.

"Originated the 'Emery Ball'."

Fred (Cy) Falkenberg, former big league and Federal league pitcher, has signed a contract to pitch for the Indianapolis American association team. Before joining the Federals Falkenberg pitched for the Cleveland and Washington American league teams, the Toledo American association team and the Worcester Eastern league club. He is a graduate of the University of Illinois. Falkenberg originated what is known as the "emery ball."

Makes Strikeout Record.

Louis Kotula, pitcher for the Washington State School For the Deaf, struck out twenty-one batsmen in a game with the team of the Benson Polytechnic school of Portland, Ore., recently. His achievement is said to equal the world's record for strikeouts in a nine inning contest. A short time previously Kotula struck out eighteen in a game with the Lincoln high school of Portland.

Italy and the Italians.
The Italians, especially of the South, are not as tall as the other Europeans. The Italians are not related, racially, to the Hebrews, but belong to the same breed as the French, Russians, English and other Aryan peoples. So far as we know, the people of Campania are not different, in origin, from the other Italians.

Nurse Saves Aged Man From bed-sore suffering with Sykes Comfort Powder

Here is proof and nurse's letter

"For ten years in my work as a nurse I have depended upon Sykes' Comfort Powder with excellent results to soothe and heal skin soreness. I was recently called to a case of an old man, 84 years of age, who had been confined to his bed for months, and his body was simply covered with terrible sores. I immediately commenced to use Sykes' Comfort Powder as thick as I could sift it on and you ought to have seen the change that took place within twenty-four hours, and the sores were soon healed."—Mrs. C. Favorite Fare.
A certain father who is fond of putting his boys through natural history examinations is often surprised by their mental agility. He recently asked them to tell him, "What animal is satisfied with the least amount of nourishment?" "The moth!" one of them shouted confidently. "It eats nothing but holes."—Youth's Companion.

Far Worse.

He—"One thing is sure. I don't intend to be criticized and censured because I have failed to realize your expectations." She—"You misunderstood me completely. All that I have done is to express my conviction that you have more than justified my fears."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Importance of Proper Ventilation.
Roughly speaking, an increase in production of 10 per cent is not at all unusual in the average office, shop or warehouse, following the installation of a ventilation system. Fresh air, properly circulated, is an essential factor in successful factory management. —Scientific American.

IRISH REVOLT STIRS ENGLAND

How Casement Planned to Land Arms For Rebels.

NOW IN TOWER OF LONDON

Arrest on Charge of Being a Traitor Did Not Come as Surprise, For He Had Always Shown Animosity Toward England—Climax of Remarkable Career.

The recent revolutionary uprisings in Ireland, while not altogether a surprise, have proved one of the most interesting developments of England's part in the European war.

The arrest of Sir Roger Casement on the charge of being a traitor caused little surprise, but the sensational manner in which it occurred stirred the entire world.

Sir Roger, under a military guard, is occupying the same apartment in the Tower of London in which Karl Lody, the German spy who was executed in the early part of the war, spent the night before his execution.

Lody was arrested in Kilmarnock. On April 14, when it was stated that Sir Roger had been arrested in Germany, he was actually aboard a German submarine in Kiel harbor, which, in company with a harmless looking tramp steamer of comparatively small tonnage, flying the Dutch colors, set out upon the voyage which ended in west Ireland ten days later.

20,000 Rifles Aboard.

The tramp was a German vessel manned by twenty picked men of the German navy and commanded by a lieutenant, with a junior officer as second in command. Its cargo was not of the innocent character described by its forged manifest, but consisted of about 20,000 rifles, machine guns and ammunition hidden beneath a layer of goods which the manifest declared as the vessel's sole cargo.

The tramp steamer, with the submarine generally close by, crept through the Cattegat, up along the coast of Norway, always keeping within territorial waters. The journey was made at a leisurely pace. Both vessels struck north and west on a course which left the Orkney islands, the Shetland islands and even the Faroe islands, far to the south.

But a British patrol boat hustled up suddenly and demanded the reason for the presence of a peaceful Dutch trader so far north. The Germans pleaded the perils from mines and submarines in the English channel as an explanation and produced the ship's papers, all of which were in perfect order.

There was nothing warlike about the ship, and of course there was no sign of the convoying submarine, which submerged when the British patrol was sighted. Even the tramp's crew was not suspicious looking. Many spoke English, expressing sympathy for the allied cause and the hope that they would not meet a ruthless U boat.

The vessel was allowed to proceed. Once the British patrol boat had disappeared the tramp steamer's course was shaped southward, and before long north Ireland was sighted. Again the pace was leisurely. The "Dutchman" kept close to the coast.

Suddenly another British patrol boat appeared. A shot was fired across the tramp steamer's bows, and the peremptory signal "I am boarding you" was hoisted. Then the tramp was ordered to accompany the patrol. After some distance had been covered the patrol sent armed boats for the crew. The "Dutch" crew then confessed that they were German navy men. Their ship, which they had just scuttled, was a small auxiliary of the kaiser's fleet, intent upon running guns to Ireland.

A boat which did not belong to the sunken vessel also was found. It was a collapsible of the pattern carried by German submarines. In it were two men, one of whom admitted that he was Sir Roger Casement. He and his companion, two officers and twenty men of the crew of the auxiliary were made prisoners.

Sir Roger was promptly landed and sent to London. The others were treated as ordinary prisoners of war.

Climax of a Remarkable Career.

This latest and perhaps final adventure of Sir Roger Casement is an amazing climax of the persistent efforts of this Irishman since the war began against the country which he had served as consul and consul general for eighteen years and which had honored him with knighthood.

Previous to the opening of the great conflict in Europe Sir Roger was known to the world at large only through a report which he made in 1912, while consul general at Rio Janeiro, on the atrocities committed on natives by employees of a British company operating in the Putumayo rubber fields. As a result of his report a British royal commission, headed by Lord Curzon, investigated the situation and brought about reforms in the treatment of men employed in the industry.

Sir Roger was in America when the European war began in August, 1914. While here he addressed on Sept. 17 an open letter to the Irish press, in which he advised Irishmen to remain neutral, while he would see to it that the country did not suffer the fate of Belgium.

Vicarious.

The Colonel's Convalescence

By ALAN HINSDALE

In one of those battles between the French and Germans when the latter were endeavoring to reach the channel Colonel Latrobe, a man of forty, was wounded and instead of being sent to a hospital was left for want of transportation at a chateau by the way. The lady who owned the place directed that he be placed in one of her best rooms and at once assumed his care. Fortunately for both, the fighting did not come near the chateau, and the colonel was left to recover, his wants being supplied by the lady, a spinster named Remercier.

Mlle. Remercier was some five years younger than Latrobe, and splinters usually preserve their youthful appearance longer than their married sisters. At any rate this is liable to be the case with unmarried women who have no cares or troubles. The colonel's nurse was still a handsome woman.

There was a long period of convalescence, during which the colonel was unable to join his command. Mlle. Remercier read to him, chatted with him, fed him, indeed made his convalescence delightful. Every morning she gathered flowers from her garden, carried them to his room and arranged them in a vase of Dresden china with her own hands. Many of the delicacies prepared for him to eat she cooked with her own hands. No matter what time of day he called for anything he needed the lady responded and always with a sympathetic smile.

In time Latrobe spent a portion of the day in an easy chair; then nearly all the day there; then he was able to walk about his room and finally to go downstairs. He was chafing to get back to the front, though loath to leave his luxurious abode and especially his fair hostess.

One morning in June he was sitting on the terrace with Mlle. Remercier. The sun shone brightly, and delicious perfume came from the roses growing beside the terrace. Conversation turned upon the school of St. Cyr, from which the colonel had been graduated a sublieutenant into the army.

"I visited St. Cyr when but seven teen years old," said mademoiselle. "I can conceive of no place so entralling to a girl of that age as a military academy. The young men in uniform are far more resplendent than those in civilian dress. There are the martial music, the military ceremonies, every thing to turn a girl's head."

"And I remember," added the colonel, "how we youngsters delighted in making love to the girls who visited St. Cyr. Lovemaking had not the meaning that it has for older men. It was what the Americans call flirting. We thought nothing of telling a girl we loved her, and the girls thought nothing of pretending to reciprocate. We enjoyed the sentiment without having to fret about the responsibilities. When we had made love to one girl we were ready for another. And when they had gone we returned to our studies as free mentally as before they had come."

"Your picture may be true with respect to the young men," said the lady, "and in most cases perhaps with regard to the girls. In my case it was different. In one of these young military students I met that which was the most serious episode of my life. He made love to me simply for the temporary enjoyment of the sentiment. Alas, it was far more than that to me! That is why I have never married."

"The brute!" exclaimed the colonel.

"No; he was simply young and did not realize the danger to me of what he was doing."

"Perhaps he did realize it in time, to his cost. I confess that there was one of my affairs that stood by me for many years. I could not shake it off. Even today, after twenty years, I see in my dreams that young face and press again that soft hand."

"And why did you, after discovering that you really loved her, not seek her out?"

"Ah, that would have served in America, where they marry for love, but not in France, where parents arrange marriages for their children."

"Who was the girl?"

"If I remember correctly she was the daughter of a gentleman of fortune, living in one of the provinces. Her name was Hortense."—He was stilled; he had forgotten her surname.

"Would you know her again, do you suppose, after not seeing her for twenty years?"

"That I could not say."

Mlle. Remercier arose and went into the house. Presently she returned with a miniature painting, which she handed to the colonel. He looked at it for a few moments as though it brought back some vague memory then suddenly he turned his eyes upon his companion in a sort of wonder.

"Where did you get this?" he asked.

"I have had it ever since the original visited St. Cyr twenty years ago."

The colonel's steady gaze gradually revealed to him that the miniature was a likeness of Mlle. Remercier at seventeen.

"Hortense!" he exclaimed.

"Henri" was the low reply.

When the colonel went back to the front he returned a married man. In deed, had not duty called him he would not have returned. He was very much pleased at receiving another wound, just severe enough to lay him up for a month. He returned to the chateau of his wife, and the month of recovery and his honeymoon were one and the same thing.
